CAROLS AND LIGHTS
The Dublin Community Church will present its Christmas Festival of Carols and Lights on December 24 at 7:30 pm. The annual tradition is starting 30 minutes later than it has in recent years because Pastor Traceymay Kalvaitis is serving both the Community Church and the Harrisville Village Church. So Harrisville will do its annual Christmas Eve service at 6:30 pm, followed immediately by the Dublin service. The Festival of Carols and Lights will feature choral versions of Christmas music both sacred and popular, and candlelight for everyone when we sing “Silent Night.” The service will run less than an hour, and the whole community is invited, including children of all ages.
Dublin Public Library

Book Buddies and Story Time: The Wonders of Winter is the December theme at the Dublin Public Library. Children’s programs are held every Tuesday from 3:45 to 4:45 pm for children in Kindergarten through 5th grade, and each Wednesday morning Story Time begins at 9:30. We will read books about snow and winter as well as Hanukkah and Christmas. Paints and glitter will be on the craft table as well as ribbon, construction paper, and glue. Come to create a new picture or ornament.

New Books at the library include Elbow Grease by John Cena, The Snowy Nap by Jan Brett, and Got to Get to Bear’s by Brian Lies. Throughout the month there will be dozens of winter books on display as well as movies. Puzzles, coloring, and games are always available. Whether you find the library quiet as a snowfall or busy as a blizzard, it is always fun to spend time there sharing the love of reading with your child.

December is a wonderful month – time to spend the evening curled up with a good book under an afghan. Treat yourself and your family to some great children’s books, adult books, and holiday books. Lots are on display or just roam the shelves to see what strikes your fancy.

Winter Weather Reminder: Make Room for the Plow

BY ROGER TREMPE

Plowing begins not long after the snowfall and the goal of the Town of Dublin Highway Department is to make the roads as safe as possible.

Residents are strongly urged not to park on the roads when snowfall is expected so plow truck drivers have enough space to clear the roads.

If the plow is approaching you and you have the ability to move over to the right so it can clear the way, please allow it to do so. If a plow is clearing an intersection, look for the driver to signal you when it is safe to pass.

Homeowners who use contractors to plow their driveway must inform the contractor that plowing and storing or piling of snow on Town streets or rights-of-way is prohibited. Hauling may be necessary if adequate snow storage is not available on your property.

Furthermore, contractors cannot push the snow across the street onto someone else’s property. The Town of Dublin Ordinance states that it is illegal to plow or deposit snow across a town-maintained road, subject to a penalty of $150 per occurrence. It is also a NH State Law, which makes a violation subject to an additional fine. This section of the code is specifically designed for the safety of the traveling public. When snow is shoveled, blown, or pushed back into the traveled portion of the street, a motorist can lose control of their vehicle, which could lead to property damage or serious injury.

Inspect mailboxes to ensure that they are securely fastened and at the proper location and – most importantly – keep children away from snow drifts and snow piles in or near the roads.

We appreciate your cooperation.

ROGER TREMPE is the Town of Dublin’s Road Agent.

Winter Preparedness
Carbon monoxide poisoning is deadly: Use CO detectors in your home.
BY TOM VANDERBILT

Now that the cold weather has arrived, and NH residents turn on their homes’ heat (oil, wood, gas, charcoal or kerosene), the risk for carbon monoxide poisoning increases dramatically.

Because we cannot see, smell, hear, or taste CO, it can be a deadly threat within our homes.

To combat this risk of poisoning, here are important tips from NH State Fire Marshal Parisi:

• DO have your heating system and water heater serviced every year by a licensed, qualified professional. The company that delivers your fuel typically has HVAC technicians and is often a good choice, or the home inspector if you are in the process of purchasing a home.

• When you buy gas-powered equipment, DO make sure it displays the seal of a national testing agency, such as Underwriter’s Laboratories (UL).

• DO have your chimney checked annually to make sure it’s not blocked by debris, which can cause CO to build up in homes and cabins.

• DON’T ever use gum, tape, or other materials to patch a vent pipe.

• DON’T ever use a generator, portable gas camp stove, grill, or hibachi indoors.

• DON’T try to heat your home with a gas range or oven.

Further, Marshal Parisi advises us to “install a battery-operated or battery-backup carbon monoxide detector (CMD) in your home, whether you live in a single-family home, multi-unit dwelling, or a rental unit. You want to make sure they are installed outside each bedroom, and on each floor including the basement, because over a third of CO-related fatalities happen when victims are asleep. If you suspect CO poisoning, get outside to fresh air immediately, and then call 9-1-1.”

“Symptoms of CO poisoning can mimic viruses such as cold or flu and may include headache, dizziness, weakness, nausea, vomiting, sleepiness, and confusion.”

Carbon Monoxide...
AVA Restoration
BY MARY LOFTIS
It has been 19 years since Alex Vogel took over the space formerly occupied by Worcester’s Garage in the center of the village. Since then AVA Restoration Services has established a reputation that draws owners of BMW, Mercedes, and other European cars from throughout New Hampshire and surrounding states. These customers care about precision and attention to detail – and that is what they get from Alex, his wife Susie, and their employee Travis Boyd.
Alex is a self-taught mechanic after getting the car “bug” at 18. Vogel family lore includes a story of Alex trading a new Ford Probe for a 1970’s era BMW Coupe. He was hooked on the brand with its well-thought-out design. He says BMW owners tend to hold on to their cars, which in turn hold on to their value. They are sometimes “higher maintenance” than other cars, but the craftsmanship of the vehicles makes that care worthwhile.
Susie Vogel is an integral part of the business. She handles the books and the shipping and knows quite a bit about European car mechanics herself. Plus, for the past year and a half Dublin resident Travis Boyd has worked at AVA, specializing in Mercedes cars. Alex says the business is fun, although it’s sometimes hectic trying to keep up with all the work.
The Vogel family is loyal to the brand. Their son Otto drives back and forth to Dublin School in a 2002 BMW, manufactured the year he was born.

News from DCS

BY NICOLE PEASE

Despite the rainy weather, DCS has had a wonderful first quarter of the school year! Staff and students enjoyed the community coming out to cheer on the Halloween Parade up to Yankee Publishing. Even though November was a shorter month, the staff worked hard to include many different activities, including writing to local veterans and an assembly in honor of Veteran’s Day.

This year brought the return of the New Hampshire Dance Institute. In just four days, the NHDI instructors coordinate a performance in which all students participate! It is amazing to see the students progress each day before the culminating evening program. Thanks to the Arts Enrichment Program for their support in bringing NHDI back to DCS.

Staff and students are looking forward to the Thanksgiving Break. We are so thankful for our special school, and our community for your continued support. We hope your families have a relaxing holiday filled with family, friends and of course food!

Thinking about the holiday season, we are planning for the DCS Holiday Concert to be held on December 14 from 6 to 7 pm. There will be a variety of both individual classroom as well as school-wide performances. It is my understanding that the Dublin Fire Department will assist a particular sleigh in arriving on the stage at the end of the concert!

Wishing you a happy and healthy end of 2018 and welcoming in of the New Year.

Route 137 Auto Repair
Serving the community since 2001.

BY DENISE FRANKOFF

In the 1990s, if you took your car to the local Ford dealer for repair there was a good chance that Dwayne McLean worked on it. In fact, Dwayne worked for local Ford dealers for 28 years, starting at Fontaine Ford, formerly in Peterborough.

After gaining years of experience, Dwayne began thinking about opening his own auto repair business.

Looking back, Dwayne is not surprised he became an auto mechanic. From an early age, he was interested in machines and curious about how things worked. As a young boy, he remembers fixing bicycles for his family and friends. After graduating from ConVal High School and attending a vocational program in Manchester, Dwayne began his career as an auto mechanic.

He began building a garage on his family’s property and in 2001 he opened Route 137 Auto Repair LLC at 367 Lower Jaffrey Road, here in Dublin.

Dwayne diagnoses and fixes cars and light trucks – all makes and models. He does computerized alignments and changes tires. He does State auto inspections. In sum, Dwayne’s business has been thriving. He attributes this to his expertise and customer service. He does not advertise; Dwayne proudly states that his business has grown thanks to his satisfied customers. Route 137 Auto Repair is open Mondays through Fridays, from 8 am to 5 pm.

He can be reached at 563-5037.

Memorial Vigil for the Homeless

On December 21, the longest night of the year, a Homeless Memorial Day vigil will be held on the steps of the Town House in Peterborough at 5 pm. This annual event, part of a state-wide commemoration, is sponsored by the Monadnock Area Transitional Shelter (MATS).

During the short ceremony, the names of New Hampshire residents who died while homeless in 2018 will be read aloud along with a proclamation from Governor Sununu. The vigil includes music and an ecumenical prayer for those in our state (some 1,700 on a given day) who continue to suffer without the basic security of a place to call home.

MATS is a 28-year-old nonprofit organization based in Peterborough that provides transitional shelter, support, and referral services for individuals and families. MATS also advocates for solutions to the complex and tragic problem of homelessness in the Monadnock Region.

Dwayne McLean is owner of 137 Auto Repair.

Wilderness Creations

Designer and builder of rustic handcrafted furniture.

BY RAMONA Branch

If you like rustic or Adirondack-style home furnishings, you need look no further than Wilderness Creations on Main Street. The company, owned by Tasha and Mark Nicholson, designs and builds handcrafted furniture and home furnishings for residential and commercial properties.

Wilderness Creations began with Mark building rustic furniture in his garage workshop in Harrisville. In 2003 the couple decided to expand Mark’s business and opened the storefront in Dublin, where Mark transferred his home workshop. As the business grew, they developed a large network of craftspeople and small companies who could expand their customers’ options. Wilderness Creations — through its network — can now offer a wider range of home furnishings including chandeliers, beds, headboards, lamps, mirrors, rocking chairs, and hooked wool rugs.

The shopping experience often starts with customers coming to the Dublin showroom to see furniture samples. Then they look through catalogs of each artist and company represented by Wilderness Creations to choose the items they want to purchase. The customer then selects the company to build their items including the wood, upholstery, and hardware. Rustic furniture is usually offered in hickory, reclaimed barn board, root, twig, birch bark, and logs.

To see this beautiful handcrafted furniture, you can visit the Wilderness Creations showroom at 1327 Main Street or you can go to www.rusticfurnituregallery.com to learn more.

Beat the Winter Doldrums

Short days, long nights, and making healthy choices.

BY RUTH CLARK

As the temperature dips, and the days get shorter, it is more challenging to eat a healthy diet. On a chilly day, it sometimes feels easier to curl up on the couch with carbs.

Some scientists say that we consume an additional 200 calories per day during the fall. When you think about it, it makes sense from a biological standpoint. Our ancestors would put on weight in the fall while food was abundant from the harvest — it was just smart to get ready for the winter famine.

Unfortunately, that biology is not very helpful when we find ourselves faced with an onslaught of food treats that doesn’t end until we turn the calendar into the new year.

Another reason that healthy eating can be so difficult as we approach winter is the lack of sunlight. As it gets darker earlier, we get less exposure to the sun, which can lead to a drop in serotonin. Serotonin is the “feel good” neurotransmitter. When it drops, mood swings or food cravings may result.

Bring the sunlight back in by spending as much time outdoors as you can. Walk during your lunch break, or move your desk closer to a window.

You might notice that your craving for carbs increases. You can boost serotonin by eating healthy carbs like root vegetables, grains, and fresh fruit instead of resorting to highly refined carbs and sugary foods.

There are some great seasonal food choices to keep you well-nourished: winter squash, parsnips, carrots (organic often yummier), potatoes (the red, blue, orange and purple contain helpful antioxidants), rutabaga (a cross between a turnip and a cabbage), turnips, and celery root.

So when you crave carbs, go for the root veggies! They are naturally sweet and dense with nutrients. And they can be roasted and paired with fruit like pears or apples.

Consistently making healthy choices can go a long way toward combatting the winter doldrums, encouraging us to get “out and about” socially as daylight retreats.

Monadnock Rotary Hosts Speakers Each Month

On December 18, Max Mitchell, Executive Director of the Jaffrey Chamber of Commerce, will discuss the challenges and opportunities of a small community.

There will be no meeting on Christmas Day or New Year’s Day, in observance of the holidays.

The Red-breasted Nuthatch

BY TOM WARREN

Once known as the Canada Nuthatch, the Red-breasted Nuthatch frequents North America’s boreal forests. They are birds of coniferous woods and mountains. You can also find them in forests of oak, hickory, maple, birch, and other deciduous trees, and they are permanent residents here in the Monadnock Region.

The Red-breasted Nuthatch irrupts south in two- to four-year cycles because conifer seed crops are poor to low in the boreal forest of Canada. They move to areas of abundant conifer seeds and are being seen here in large numbers. One first appeared this year at Pt. Pelee, Ontario, on July 25, an early indicator of this year’s irruption. It has a bluish-gray back and cinnamon breast.

They climb up and down trees foraging for seeds and insects like their cousins, the White-breasted Nuthatch.

They nest in rotten tree stubs or snags and smear the nest hole with pine pitch. The birds fly deftly into the hole to avoid being smeared with pine pitch. They produce five to six eggs, with reddish-brown spots in a normal clutch, which will hatch in 12 days. While the female incubates the eggs, the male brings food to her. The nest is carefully constructed of soft grass, feathers, fur, and shredded bark.

The bird has a soft, long song unlike its cousin, the White-breasted Nuthatch.

The Red-breasted Nuthatch will come to feeders, selecting peanuts, sunflower seeds, and will also eat suet, especially during the bitter cold days. They appear in mixed flocks with other birds such as chickadees and titmice. They are also known to cache seeds in bark crevices for retrieval during bitter cold, windy weather.

TOM WARREN is Dublin’s resident ornithologist.
